

Close Window

Audit Finds Little Evidence of "Double-Dipping"

State Auditor Tom Wagner releases the results of his latest audit into state lawmakers who also hold other state jobs.

By Mark Eichmann

Monday, July 30, 2007

The yearly audit found only minor problems related to some sloppy book-keeping, and resulting in the re-payment of just $851. Wagner says the "dual-employment" audit is difficult to do because it's hard to exactly pin-down what time lawmakers arrive for work at Legislative Hall in Dover after leaving their other job.

Printed from: <http://www.wilm.com>